Figure 1 is a line graph showing the effect of the concentration of the inhibitor on the rate of polymerization. The x-axis is labeled "Concentration of inhibitor (mole/l)" and ranges from 0 to 0.001. The y-axis is labeled "Rate of polymerization (mole/l·hr)" and ranges from 0 to 0.001. There are three curves labeled I, II, and III. Curve I is the highest, followed by II, and then III. All curves show a decrease in the rate of polymerization as the concentration of the inhibitor increases.

Figure 1 displays a sequence of 16 grayscale images arranged in a 4x4 grid, illustrating the effect of increasing salt-and-pepper noise on a handwritten digit '4'. The images are organized into two columns of eight rows each. The first column shows the original image and the effect of increasing noise levels from 0.0001 to 0.0015. The second column shows the effect of increasing noise levels from 0.0020 to 0.0035. As the noise level increases, the digit becomes increasingly obscured by black and white pixels, eventually becoming unrecognizable.

Figure 1 illustrates the experimental setup. A subject is seated at a table, looking at a video screen. A video camera is positioned above the screen to record the subject's movements. A light source is positioned to the left of the screen. A target is positioned on the screen. The subject's hand is positioned near the target. The diagram shows the relative positions of the subject, camera, screen, light source, and target.

Figure 1 is a schematic representation of the experimental design. It shows a sequence of events: a subject is presented with a stimulus (a word), then a response is given (a word), and then a feedback is provided (a word). The sequence is repeated for multiple trials. The diagram is divided into two main sections: 'Stimulus' and 'Response'. The 'Stimulus' section shows a word being presented, and the 'Response' section shows a word being given. The feedback section shows a word being provided.
